Good Evening,

While I think the concern of running out of space is a valid one, I don't think expanding the Cogmagun landfill is the solution at all. As of right now there is an active fire involving over 12 departments from not only our county, but surrounding counties.

Instead of finding another place to dump and leave waste, have there been any solutions looked at that could have the waste be used for something else? A way of breaking down the waste and disposing of it? There has to be another solution.

Have solutions from other countries been looked at? Is there a way to better separate biodegradable waste from non-biodegradable waste?

I think looking into another option instead of dumping and piling is the way to go. As of right now destroying more of our precious rural area is not an option. It is close to a river that is affected by the waste, and catches on fire often sending harmful smoke to all surrounding communities. Wall-E seems to be getting closer by the day.

On behalf of the community and the land, find a better place to put our waste.

Sincerely,
Hants County
